THE MAYAN Ouroboros
The Cosmic Cycles Come Full Circle
The True Positive Mayan Prophecy is Revealed

DRUNVALO MELCHIZEDEK

"This book is a continuation of my last book, The Serpent of Light, and of the guidance our native ancestors are sharing with us... The Maya believe that they have a responsibility to the world to provide the guidance necessary for humanity to make a change to perceive the One Reality in a new way from one’s heart. In other words, they wish to help leave this old world and enter a new world, which they believe is absolutely necessary at this time in history. We are in the moment of rapid change, and most of you can feel it. From my heart to yours, prepare for your world to open in unexpected ways." — DRUNVALO

There have been many interpretations and predictions about the year 2012, known as the Mayan End Time—touted in everything from books to television commercials—and what comes next. But what do the Mayans themselves have to say about these prophecies? As Drunvalo explains, the Ancient Ones are here now and ready to share with you an initiation into an ancient way of interpreting our everyday lives beyond what we have been told by society, religion, government, and our families.

We are in a period of transition. There is an untold positive side to the prophecies. And we can prepare ourselves. As much as any book can, this book tells us how. Visit Drunvalo’s website at www.drunvalo.net.
This book is a continuation of my last book, The Serpent of Light, and of the guidance our native ancestors are sharing with us. These ancestors are the living indigenous people who are still on Earth, and who, I believe, hold the keys to our future.

In my discussion with the Itza Mayan Council of Elders in the Yucatan, Mexico, in early 2011, it became clear that they believe that in the last minutes before the end of these cycles, on December 21, 2012, the Maya will be completely transparent to the world. They will not hide the secrets they have kept for thousands of years, but openly allow the world to know what they know, for they are aware for certain that you are them. And what happens to you happens to the Maya.

The Maya believe that they have a responsibility to the world to provide the guidance necessary for humanity to make a change to perceive the One Reality in a new way from one’s heart. In other words, they wish to help leave this old world and enter a new world, which they believe is absolutely necessary at this time in history.

I will be just as open when it comes to revealing Mayan information. My intention is to assist all my relatives as they ascend—and we are all related.
When the White Snake bites its tail—the ouroboros—and is perfectly aligned with the cycles of the Earth, the Sun, and the center of the Galaxy, which are also biting their tails as the cycles come full circle, anything is possible. Will humanity respond and dream a new dream? Whatever happens will be in Divine Order, and as the events unfold, we will all soon witness the results of thousands of years of preparation by our ancestors.

This native information may contain the hope of the world, as the Ancient Ones are here now and ready to share with you an initiation into an ancient way of interpreting our everyday lives beyond what we have been told by society, religion, government, and our families.

We are in the moment of rapid change, and most of you can feel it. From my heart to yours, prepare for your world to open in unexpected ways.

Only one spirit moves through All Life everywhere
And everything is alive.
SACRED GEOMETRY

PROVES

This One Universe of stars and planets was created through the shape and proportions of a simple sphere, and can equally be seen in a circle.

As you understand this, you understand the importance of cycles.

Time is circular.

Space is circular.

Dimensions are circular. Size is circular.

Even all light waves become circular eventually.

So when a cycle of 25,625 years comes to an end and a new beginning emerges, perhaps we should see and know the sacredness in the moment of our everyday lives.
Remember who YOU are in the dance of cycles,
and
you immediately win the Game of Life.

What’s your prize?

Oneness reveals Itself
all around you and within you.

Polarity disappears.
Death is mastered.
Immortality becomes reality.
And YOU come full circle when you realize that what is all around you, Nature, is also within you.

Do you know you are filled with stars!
YOU

SILENCE
Chapter One

SEDONA, 2007

The Mayan civilization is hidden, complicated, and difficult for the outer world to penetrate. There are many Mayan councils that have emerged in the last two decades, and they do not all agree with each other, much like it is around the world in other indigenous tribes, and for that matter, the way it is in the world in general.

The Guatemala Mayan Council of Elders was established in 2000. The president of this council is a man named Valerio Canche Yah. He mostly remains invisible, yet his power is very strong. Even though the legal documents say that a presidential term is three years, he has been in power since the council’s inception.

Another member of this council is Don Alejandro Cirilo Perez, who has become the ambassador to the world for the Mayan people. He is a thirteenth-generation Mayan shaman and priest and is deeply respected by his people. He was a Mayan bright light to the world, speaking around the world including the United Nations attempting to help his people, but also trying to help the whole world. He also became the first indigenous Mayan to become an ambassador for the government of Guatemala.
There is another Mayan, Don Pedro Pablo Chuc Pech, who is also a member of the Guatemalan Mayan Council of Elders. I met him in Paris as we both spoke on stage to an audience of about 1,100 people. From the moment I met him, I realized that he was a great man, and my heart felt him as a brother. Don Pedro Pablo was given the title of the head of the Itza Mayan Council of Elders in the Mexican Yucatan, but he is such a humble man that he gives no importance to it. This was a council that was created mostly to interface with the industrial world. The Itza Maya are the largest tribe in all of Mayaland, which includes not only Mexico, but also Belize, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, and other regions.

There is another Mayan, Hunbatz Men, whose full name is Hunbatz Mena, and is a member of the Itza Mayan Council of Elders. Hunbatz now mostly resides at the Lol Be Mayan Compound near the Mayan temple Chitzen Itza, where the modern Maya are attempting to remember their lost knowledge. Knowledge that was purposefully destroyed by the Spanish Conquistadors and the Catholic Church.

In March of 2003, Hunbatz Men invited me, and a world group that I formed, to give ceremony in the Yucatan. I will speak about this later. While these extensive ceremonies were being performed, the Mayan leaders above formed another council that may someday be of assistance to the world. It is called the Council of Elders of America, which brought together around three hundred indigenous elders who lead the tribes all over the Americas, not just Maya, but open to all tribes.

Though these indigenous tribes of the Americas may seem to be simple people who live deep in jungles and high on mountain-tops, they hold within their hearts information, knowledge and memories that will, at the right moment, become invaluable and necessary to the entire world. In your lifetime, you will understand.

We often forget that the Ancient World still lives within our society, and to this day is continuing to vibrate with the heart of Mother Earth, the heart of Father Sun, and the heart of the Universe to keep our fragile world in balance.

I believe that without the Maya and other global tribes that are part of the Maya, we would live in a world of utter chaos far beyond what we now are experiencing. Through the Maya you are about to witness a revelation of consciousness that will, according to the Mayan Prophecy, culminate in the birth of a new Earth and a new humanity.

To be certain, the Mayan Prophecy is a prophecy of great hope and beauty that begins on December 22, 2012, but the Maya are also realistic, and acknowledge that the old cycle and the old way of life will end on December 21, 2012. The window of time that centers on these dates will be explained in this book.

We must remember our past if we are to understand where we are headed in the future, for everything in the Universe moves in cycles, and the memory, knowledge, information, and wisdom that we need to ascend into higher consciousness is held in the DNA of our ancestors. We cannot push them aside and blindly forge ahead into the future, or the result will be catastrophic. We need them, and our living ancestors need us.

We have a singular chance to reconnect with our ancestors who are still alive on Earth in forms like the Maya and other native global peoples. We are doing this at the last minute of time before the Great Shift, but if we do so with our hearts open, we will find our way into the New World and all will be well.

The Serpent of Light Continues

We begin with a story that the Maya gave to me to give to you. It moves like a river, turning and changing direction, but always heading to the ocean, which for us is ascension. These stories will begin to narrow the gap between our understanding of the Ancient and the Modern World. They will shift our comprehension of how the Modern World interprets the Sun, the Earth, and our incredible Universe. If you can view what I am saying with your heart and not your mind, you will understand.

I will translate into the language of the Modern World what the Mayan people themselves are saying to me. Still, we are all different and understand differently. The human language is not perfect, but my intention is to reach your heart where I feel you will understand intuitively.

Guatemala, 2007

The Mayan Calendar is the most accurate calendar ever discovered on Earth. Humans are amazed at how an Ancient tribal people could be more precise than the Modern World and all of its technologies. Even today, the Maya are outperforming NASA and the world’s scientific community when it comes to the cycles of time. Now humanity is looking to the Maya to understand this date of December 21, 2012 that is emphasized in the Mayan Calendar, and the Maya have responded.

In July of 2007, Don Alejandro Cerilo Perez and his wife Elizabeth came to Sedona, Arizona, where I live, to speak publicly about the Mayan Prophecy. The next day they met with me. They spoke with me about some of the Mayan prophecies and asked for assistance with these prophecies.

The first thing Don Alejandro told the public was that nothing we have read, heard, or seen about the Mayan culture and the Mayan Calendar was approved or written by any of the Mayan councils, and therefore was not spoken by the Mayan people. Everything we have learned about the Mayans has come from the universities, governments, religions, and archaeologists, lay people like Jose Arguëlles, and even some who are Mayan, but working on their own.

According to Don Alejandro, speaking to an audience of about 300 people, the Mayan Council of Elders of Guatemala, or any Mayan Council has not said one word to the world in 527 years (from 2007). That’s a very long silence.

The Maya, in 2007, began to break their silence. You can see why this should be of great importance to the world. The truth about the Maya can only be spoken by the Maya themselves. A truth made up by outsiders who are simply guessing or who are living a consciousness that has almost nothing to do with the Maya cannot be valid.

The Maya wish to inform you that the world that you know, that you live within, is not what you think it is. We modern people think that the world is solid and real, and that nothing can change it except external events. We believe it is fixed and will go on for eternity with or without our presence. The Maya wish to inform you that this is not true.
The world is images that are created by consciousness and can be changed by consciousness through ceremony—especially consciousness that is connected directly into the human heart.

You are about to enter into a way of being that is only understood by the Ancient World; the Modern World has almost no idea of what we are about to discuss, and generally, it doesn’t even know that it exists. And yet, this way of being is exactly what you, the Modern World, need at this moment in history, but you probably don’t know it. Humanity is very much in the situation of a butterfly moments before it comes out of its cocoon. Everything it knew is about to change, and a completely new world is about to emerge.

Drunvalo

So why is a white man speaking about the Maya? In order to answer that question, I will have to tell you a little bit about my life. I’ll keep it as brief as possible.

Like many people on Earth, when I was in my twenties, I wondered why I was here on Earth, and what life is all about. What is this planet and its brilliant Sun? What is really transpiring in our everyday lives? I had so many questions.

I became so intrigued with these ideas that I went to college and studied physics and mathematics—but not because I wanted to become a physicist or find quality employment. I thought that the physicists and the mathematicians must know what these stars and planets are, and studied for years and years until I finally came to the conclusion that scientists don’t know any more about the Universe than I do. They are lost, and they too are searching.
I then switched from the left brain to the right brain and began to study art, art history, and painting. I spent two years studying 20,000 years of art history, from caveman to modern times, and slowly I began to get an inkling, through the female side of the brain, of what life was about. But the truth was still extremely elusive.

After I graduated from college, I decided to begin to study meditation. I had often heard that the answers to life were within, and it made sense. My first attempt at meditation was with the Hindus. Through them I was led to study mantras, the effects of sound on consciousness. The effects were so powerful that I found myself becoming serious about this method of understanding life.

One day while I was deep in meditation, an unexpected phenomenon startled me. I didn’t ask for it to happen—it just happened. Two spheres of light, roughly sixteen inches in diameter, entered the room together floating in space and moved quickly up to me on both sides of my body about a meter away. They were brilliant lights. One was a beautiful ultraviolet color; the other one was a very bright green. I had no idea what they were, but for some reason I felt no fear, as though this was a normal event.

And then inside my head, telepathically, I heard these words: “We are not separate from you. We are you on another level of existence.” I didn’t know what they meant, but it made me curious about existence on a far more focused and fevered level. These two spheres of light began to lead me, and after over forty years, they are still in my heart and in my life.

Through my interactions with these two spheres of light, I was led to over seventy spiritual teachers around the world and studied many forms of meditation. At the same time, relevant to our discussion today, the two spheres of light also guided me into the indigenous world to begin the understanding of their ancient ways.

These two spheres of light soon informed me that they were “angels.” They said that angels were formless beings, but took form in order to give human beings something to connect with. And they said that long ago they used the form of a human being with wings, but in truth, it is not their natural form. I had never had contact with an angel before, but their essence felt so warm and comfortable that I trusted them, and in all of these years, I still trust them.

Early in my relationship with the “angels,” they led me to a tribe in New Mexico called the Taos. I spent fourteen years on or near the Taos Pueblo with the Taos. One of my mentors at the pueblo was a man named Tellus Goodmorning. He was in his nineties when I first met him, and he’s now passed to the next world. He was the head of the Peyote Church for the United States, and he asked me to be his student. (Strangely enough, he never allowed me to take peyote. He said I didn’t need it.)

Slowly, other members of the Taos Pueblo began to show me their ancient ways. One was named Juan Concha, the last chief of the Taos Pueblo who was given the title of the “kasiki,” or the spiritual leader, by the tribe.

But I watched the inner work of these Native Americans unfold in my life, and I couldn’t deny it. After fourteen years with the Taos, I had an indigenous training that changed my life. I was prepared to go out into the world to work with other tribes, which the Taos Pueblo said was my purpose in this lifetime.
The spheres of light then led me to what are called the Anasazi. They were the Ancient Ones who lived before the Hopi, the Sioux, the Lakota, the Cheyenne, and most of the other tribes we are familiar with. Through the Anasazi, I began to understand and know the sacredness of ceremony. Because of them, I was led to the Maya.

In 1985 I was directed by the spheres of light (through a man known as Thoth, the ancient Egyptian scribe) to go into the Yucatan, Mexico to study and do ceremony. Thoth is also someone who the Maya have had a long history with as he was the King of Atlantis while the Maya were living there. We will speak more about this later.

Thoth led me to do ceremony in sacred Mayan temples with names like Uxmal, Labna, Kaba, Chichen Itza, Tulum, Kahunlich, Palenque, and even into Guatemala to Tikal. It was an initiation for me, and the Itza Maya watched as I began to work on this level.

A few years later, I met Hunbatz Men, a Mayan priest and shaman who is connected with the Itza Mayan Council of Elders living in the Yucatan. He began to teach me the Mayan way of perceiving the world, which had different qualities than those of the tribes I was used to in the United States. In the late 1990s, Hunbatz asked me to perform ceremony with him, and for many years we were in ceremony together at various temples in the Yucatan.

Then for years I was asked to speak on their council, which I did to continue my relationship with them and to understand further their ancient ways. In the last couple of years the Itza Mayan Council of Elders has asked to be one of their council members.
In March 2003, Hunbatz Men asked me to come to Mexico, where we began to do deeper ceremony with tribes from all over Central and South America. My understanding of the true meaning of ceremony changed as I began to go deeper and deeper into the Ancient World and closer to the Source of Life. It wasn’t until recently, in 2007, that I actually felt that I understood what ceremony means to the Ancient World. But the past ceremonies were necessary for me to reach this point where I could go beyond my white man education.

Evolving Consciousness

We know that human consciousness is evolving. Science has recorded this evolution over long periods of time. But in recent times, modern man has begun to accelerate its evolution in a way that most of us have not realized. Many of you are aware that the feeling of time is speeding up, but so is human evolution.

In the late eighties, the Encyclopedia Britannica’s editors released a major discovery: if you took all the knowledge that humanity had acquired since the beginning of our civilization, which began with the Sumerians about 6,000 years ago, and continued to 1900 AD, that same amount of information would double in the fifty years from 1900 through 1950.

During that fifty-year period, we learned as many bits of information, thinking in terms of computers, as we did in the previous 6,000 years! Nothing like this had ever happened in all of known history before.
Then they discovered that from 1950 to about 1970 (these are approximate dates), humanity learned as much as we did in 6,000 years again, in only twenty years. But it continued, from 1970 to about 1980, and we again learned as much as we learned in the first 6,000 years. And it kept speeding up to about 1986 or so, when it doubled again. It is still continuing to accelerate.

There was a time in the eighties when the information that was being collected from space and Earth was flooding in so fast that NASA couldn’t even download it into their computers. They were eight or nine years behind the entering of the data they had collected. They had to wait until the hardware and the software caught up to humanity’s ability to learn.

Today, we are on a straight-up curve. We are learning as much as we learned in 6,000 years every few weeks now. This seems impossible, but it’s true.

The Sanskrit Vedas, written about 6,000 years ago, speak about this time we now live in. They talk about how we learn about electricity and magnetism; they mention... that “we learn to fly in the sky with metal boxes,”—that’s actually a quote. And then on a single day, according to the Vedas, we give it all up. Much like a child as he grows older and lets go of his teddy bear and reaches for a higher vision, humanity will do exactly that—let it all go. That may be harder to believe than ascension itself, but life is full of surprises.

From the Mayan point of view, high technology is not a sign of an advanced civilization—it’s an indication of a civilization that is about to be advanced. What good is technology to a people when they discover that the human body and human consciousness are capable of doing everything that technology is now capable of doing and far, far more? Would we not let go of external technology if we discovered that inner technology was vastly superior? The Maya believe that this realization is going to change us forever.

When we look back at the ancient cultures, it becomes clear that we humans are now very different than we were, say, 2,000 years ago. That’s pretty obvious: not just our modern techno-toys, but different in how we perceive the very reality around us, what we think the reality is, and who we think we are within this reality. The Mayas say that we are about to go through a change of great magnitude, a change in consciousness. We are becoming something brand new, a new species with a new way of perceiving reality. That’s really what this date of December 21, 2012 is about: a change in human consciousness that we call ascension. We are going to talk about many other subjects, but this is always the primary direction we are headed. Human consciousness is approaching a narrow point in time when human evolution speeds up tremendously and makes a jump into a new level of consciousness. We become something greater than what is now called human.

With this understanding, we will return to explain what the Maya have to say about what we are about to become. We will be cognizant of this understanding when we speak about human consciousness changing. First it is mandatory to remember what ceremony is, for it is within ceremony that our ability to ascend will be rediscovered.

Ceremony

In the Ancient World, ceremony meant far more than what we in the Modern World can even begin to grasp. Ceremony is direct communication and a living bond with Great Spirit, Mother Earth, Father Sky, and All Life Everywhere. The Ancients believed that before any harmonious change in the human world could take place on Earth, a ceremony had to be performed. Ceremony is what links our hearts and the heart of the Earth and the heart of the Sun and the heart of the Universe and everything and everyone that exists.

When people from the Ancient World entered into ceremony, they entered into a sacred world of infinite possibilities. The Maya have predicted that as we approach the years between 2012 and 2015, humanity will enter into chaos on a very deep level. But you will have no reason for fear. It is not the end; it is the beginning. Is it the end of the cycle of time and the end of the world? Or is it the beginning of a new cycle of great beauty and hope? This is what we have to discover.

If we focus on the end of the cycle as we look at the world around us, we see that everything in modern times, right now, is beginning to degenerate and break apart on vast and primal levels, exactly as the Maya predicted long ago.

Take, for example, global warming and the environment rapidly approaching a probable Ice Age (first it warms up) that would eliminate most life on Earth. The world's financial system is on the verge of total collapse, which we are struggling with all around the world. Diseases such as HIV/AIDS, H5 and H5N1 viruses, and other diseases threaten world pandemics. There are over forty wars occurring at this moment—in addition to Afghanistan and the Arab Spring, there are many other wars going on globally that we ignore. Even more painful, approximately four billion people are living on less than two dollars a day, and 25,000 children starve each day. A human population reaching seven billion people continues to expand to the point of destroying all life on Earth simply by existing.

I could go on, but your heart knows what I'm speaking about. The times we live in are precarious, to say the least. According to the Maya, all of this chaos was predicted long ago. We are approaching the end of a very long cycle, and this chaos always happens when the cycle ends. It's part of the cycle of life and death. It's natural.

The Maya predict that this chaos we are now experiencing is just beginning. Something far more powerful than anything we are now experiencing or have ever experienced in our memory is about to appear on Earth.

It's time we all listened to what is coming and prepare inwardly. It is not a time to continue to live as though everything is normal, for it is not. But what replaces the normal reality is far, far greater.
But while the coming change will have plenty of negative consequences, there is a positive aspect that the Maya and I want you to be aware of. Yes, there probably will be Earth changes, but there is something else far more important, extremely beautiful, and positive, that no one is discussing and most of science is unaware of. This is a message of great hope.

Whether this end of the Mayan Long Count cycle is a human disaster or a blessing for all of humanity will depend on humankind itself, as was explained to me not only by the Maya but by many other tribes. At a time like this, when a page in history is being turned and civilization is in crisis, everything depends upon how humanity assimilates all of its known experience, knowledge, and wisdom into a body of awareness that leads humanity into the future.

If this future experience is sustainable, then we survive; if it isn’t, we go the way of the dinosaurs and become extinct. It is up to us. We have the power to change our future now. In fact, the here and now is the only place and time possible to make this change.

When we speak of this new consciousness, there is a paramount understanding, or secret, about how this higher consciousness actually manifests. I could put this into a sentence, but the sentence isn’t understood by most people when I say it. I’m going to say it anyway, and then come back and explain it more.

This leap in consciousness can only be acquired when the awareness of the Ancient World is combined with the awareness of the Modern World.

SEDONA, 2007
Simply put, we live in both the Ancient World and the Modern World simultaneously, but with great difficulty. These two worlds need to understand each other and absorb each other’s knowledge and wisdom, or neither will be able to move upwards into a higher consciousness. This requires cooperation.

The Ancient World is ready to move now. Most of the tribes of the entire world are ready for change. But the Modern World has still not understood the need for its ancestors—the Ancient World. Why are our ancestors important to our survival, and furthermore, why is our survival important to our ancestors?

The Maya of Eternal Time

In this Modern World, most of us live in a synthetic reality. By synthetic I mean separate from nature in our houses, our cars, and even our shoes. Our technology shields us from the outside world and the perils of nature, but it also shields us from an essential electrical connection to Mother Earth that all indigenous people understand. (I suggest that you educate yourself about a new science that has developed called Earthing at www.earthing.com.)

Because of our pride in technological achievements, we can’t imagine why an indigenous person, with his or her feet in the dirt and barely able to feed him- or herself, could possibly have any kind of effect on this Modern World.

Let me explain why the Maya and other tribes are so important to humanity for our very existence. If you allow this understanding to give birth within yourself, you can go on into the hidden world of the Mayan people, where they will begin to reveal their way of life and wisdom to you.
Sacred Geometry

Looking into nature and the Universe, we see that the human body and all known life forms are governed by a mathematical series of numbers called the Fibonacci Sequence (more on that later). Our human body actually contains these patterns of numbers in billions of places, for every cell contains them, and proportional relationships of many parts of our own bodies correspond to them.

Sacred Geometry is the underlying blueprint of the Universe. It gives order to what would otherwise be total chaos. The arrangement of every single materialized object in existence, regardless of size, is brought into order through the geometrical patterns that we call Sacred Geometry. Planets orbit around the Suns with precision according to Sacred Geometry.

The Ancient World completely understood this, as evidenced by the vast Sacred Geometry embedded within each of the Pyramids, but the Modern World has forgotten this basic knowledge, and for the last 500 years has been in the dark. Now that NASA has remembered this ancient knowledge and is combining it with modern knowledge, a clearer picture of the Universe is emerging. Without this ancient knowledge, we could never know the truth of reality.

The Golden Mean

In my understanding, the Golden Mean, also called the phi ratio, is paramount beyond all other ratios and proportions in the Universe. You can take any straight line, no matter how long it is, and cut it in a particular place to create the Golden Mean. The smaller part of this line will equal one, and the longer part will be approximately 1.6180339, which is an irrational number that continues on for infinity. It’s a proportion you can see not only in planets, stars, and moons, but also in any life form on Earth, including your own body.

If you look at the joints and bones in your hand and divide the length of the bone that includes your fingernail into the length of the next one, the phi ratio appears: 1.6180339. If you then take the length of that bone and divide it into the length of the next bone in your finger, the phi ratio appears again. You will find the Golden Mean ratio in all of your bones.

I feel certain that the Golden Mean is the most important proportion/ratio of all the other possibilities of mathematics that exist. Even the actual size of the planets and their moons is not an accident, but perfectly match Sacred Geometry.

But for life, you, me and All Life Everywhere, we don’t know how to create the Golden Mean ratio. In fact, I don’t believe the Golden Mean actually exists naturally anywhere in the Universe. It’s only this idea, this ideal proportion, but in nature, the Golden Mean is only approximated. It doesn’t actually exist in nature anywhere. Life doesn’t know how to use numbers that never ever end. But didn’t I say that the Golden Mean is found throughout your body? Am I contradicting myself? Let me explain.

Life figured out this awesome proportion from the very beginning of creation, but a man named Fibonacci rediscovered it only a few hundred years ago. The Fibonacci Series goes 0, 1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 21, 34, 55, 89, 144, and so on. It simply is a series where you add the first number to the next number in the series to arrive at the new third number. So if you start with 5 and add it to 8, the next number is 13.
But if you divide these numbers into themselves with the Golden Mean ratio of 1.6180339 (approximately) as your goal, you begin to understand. You divide 1 into 1, you get 1, and this number is under this Golden Mean proportion. If you divide 1 into 2, you get 2, which is over the number, but it’s closer to the actual number. Then when you divide 2 into 3, you get 1.5, which is closer to this number, but it’s under. When you divide 3 into 5, you get 1.666667, which is over but closer again. And if you watch this, as you continue to divide the smaller into the larger number you keep getting closer to the Golden Mean ratio of 1.6180339. By the time you divide 34 into 55 and get 1.6176, you are getting very close.

A nautilus shell
Here is a nautilus shell that’s been cut in half so you can see inside. Each chamber is being created from the Fibonacci Series. You see these chambers at first are kind of unevenly spaced and very strange, because these chambers in the beginning of the nautilus shell are not close to the Golden Mean. The first chamber is the number 1, and then it continues, 1, then 2, then 3, then 5, etc. The first chambers are not very close to the Golden Mean, and your eye can see how off it is. As they get higher in the Fibonacci Series, they get closer and closer and closer to this perfect Golden Mean. You can see it taking place right before your eyes in this nautilus shell as the chambers get more and more perfect.

This is what life does. In order to get around the fact that it can’t use these complex irrational numbers, Life has found a way to use single digit whole numbers only, like 1 and 2 and 3. And life uses these numbers not only in your bodies, but in every single thing alive on Earth including things that we do not consider alive, such as crystals.

Remember, what we are talking about here is why the Ancient World and the Modern World need each other in order to survive the Mayan Prophecy. I will explain this using the image of a sneezewort plant. It’s a strange-looking plant, but it actually grows according to the Fibonacci Sequence; you can see the Fibonacci Sequence unfold before your eyes. As it comes out of the ground, it first grows 1 leaf, then 1 more; then it grows 2 leaves, then 3, then 5, then 8 leaves, and then 13 flowers.

The question to you is: How does this plant know, after it has grown 5 leaves, how many leaves it will grow next? Eight leaves is the answer, but why not 10 or 12 or some other number? How does it know that?

The Fibonacci Sequence of the sneezewort plant

SEDONA, 2007
It knows what to grow because the plant looks back at its past, which is 3, and it knows that when it adds its past to its present, 5, the future is located at 8. It knows exactly that the number is 8.

This is the situation that humanity is in right now. The Modern World is like 5 right now, and it doesn’t know where it’s going because it’s completely disconnected from its past. But when and if it reconnects with the Ancient World, and when it adds the Ancient World to the Modern World, it will know exactly where it’s supposed to go. We can’t know where our consciousness is going to expand to without reconnecting to the Ancient World. It’s essential. It’s not an option. We must. The Ancient World is completely prepared for us. They are ready. They know they need us. We just don’t know we need them. This is the problem. But it is one I believe you will solve.
